An online course for the public health workforce.
Information on signing up for this course is located at the end of this document.

How to Create and Lead a Group

The course material is designed around group participation — primarily through group discussions on specific topics and the results of activities in the units. Sample screens are provided as visual guides.

Plan a Group

Before you begin, gather colleagues from your organization who are interested in taking the "Roots of Health Inequity" course. Consider including colleagues who work in different parts of your organization with different experiences in addressing health equity and learning about the root causes. With this type of diversity, your group discussions may reveal surprising insights.

Select the Group Leader

This person will serve as a central contact and administrator for the group. Group leader responsibilities include:

- Creating the group
- Selecting the units, activities, and discussion prompts for your group
- Establishing a calendar with schedule, goals, meetings
- Inviting others to join the group
- Posting bulletin board updates and announcements
- Encouraging and monitoring online discussions

HINT: Leaders may want to look over the course units before starting their group to get a sense of the course topics, interactive presentations and depth of content. This will help the leader allocate time and create a schedule that meets the needs of the group. To do this, join the "General Group" and look for the unit titles under "Units."

Create a Group

The person designated to be the group leader must create the group. Once members have joined the group, the leader can give administrative access to others. Follow these steps to create a group. See sample screens for visual guidance.

1. Log in to the "Roots of Health Inequity."
2. On your dashboard page, click on the "Create a Group" link under the heading "My Actions."
3. The next screen provides fields for a group name, description, affiliation, address and privacy options. The options for privacy are as follows:
• List in groups directory allows all members of the "Roots" Community to see this group name. Choose this if you want others to join your group without an invitation.

• Open means that membership requests are accepted immediately.

• Invitation Only means that membership requests must be approved by the group leader.

4. The units are copied into your group. This may take several minutes to complete.

5. The group is ready for you to invite members, create a calendar, a bulletin board post or discussion.

NOTE: Once your group is populated with members, discussions, calendar events and bulletin board posts, the page will look like the current “General Group” page. (See Sample Screen # 8).

Invite Others to Join

Members of your group can use the "Invite Members" link located under "Actions" on the group page to send an email to one or more people inviting them to join the group. The email includes a direct link to your group, as well as space for a personal note (See Sample Screens # 6&7).

Establish a Strategy for Completion

The group leader can use tools in the "Roots" Community to post goals, target dates, meetings and an overall schedule. The bulletin board can be used to make announcements and direct group members to specific areas of the course for discussion. The calendar is useful for posting a long-term schedule, as well as specific events like meetings or conference calls. The discussion area is where conversations can take place outside of the individual units. These are good for general topics and discussing the course as a whole. The group leader can also email all the members of their group to send them reminders or notify them of upcoming meetings.

Begin the Course

The units for the course are located on the upper right portion of the group page under the title “Units.” Members can access the course at any time, once they are in a group. The units can be studied in any order. As a team, the group should determine which units they want to study first. Note that Continuing Education is available in "Unit 1: Where Do We Start?".

Take the Course as an Individual

If you want to take the course with others, but are not able to form a group from your organization, join the "General Group." You will see the comments from other members and you can engage in their discussions, activities, and bulletin board posts. Access the course units from the group page under the heading "Units." Take this course as a solitary individual by creating a private, closed group. Comments and postings from other members will not appear in this type of group.
Sample #1: Log In to the “Roots of Health Inequity” Online Course

Find the log in page here: http://members.rootsofhealthinequity.org/
Sample #2: Create a Group from Your Dashboard
Sample #3: Fill Out the Form

[Image of a form for creating a group with fields for name, affiliation, location, privacy options, and group description]

PRIVACY OPTIONS
Groups are private. Comments, discussions and bulletin board posts are available only to group members. However, allowing other members of the “Roots” Community to join your group could affect the feeling of privacy and the willingness to share ideas.

☐ List in groups directory
Allows all members of the “Roots” Community to see this group name. Choose this if you want others to join your group without an invitation.

Membership requests *
 sorte
☐ Open: Membership requests are accepted immediately.
☐ Invitation Only: Membership requests must be approved by the Group Leader.

Group Description
This is optional. If your group is “open”, consider describing your organization, the type of people involved in this group, as well as your goals for taking this course.
Sample #4: The Course Units Copy to Your New Group

The group in this sample is called “Test Group” your group can have any title you choose.
Sample #5: Your New Group is Ready
Sample #6: Invite Others to Join Your Group

My Dashboard » Test Group » Send Invitation

Send invitation

Email addresses or usernames

Enter up to 10 email addresses or usernames. Separate multiple addresses by commas or new lines. Each person will receive an invitation message from you.

Your invitation will have the following text and include links to your group and this course.

Email Subject Title: Join Me at the "Roots of Health Inequity" Online Course

Email Message:
Please join me in taking NACCHO's "Roots of Health Inequity" online course to study social justice as it relates to public health. The course is made up of five units that provide an in-depth look at specific topics using interactive maps and timelines, slideshows, resource libraries, video presentations, and interviews with practitioners.

The course material is designed around group participation, and I'd like you to be a member of my learning group called Test Group. To join this group, go to http://www.rootsofhealthinequity.org/groups/test-group.

Log in with your NACCHO email and password. If you do not have one, first register at the main NACCHO website.

[ Your Personal Message Goes Here ***]

I look forward to working with you.

Learn more about this course at http://www.rootsofhealthinequity.org/

Personal message

Switch to plain text editor Send invitation
Greetings!

Please join me in taking NACCHO’s “Roots of Health Inequity” online course to study social justice as it relates to public health. The course is made up of five units that provide an in-depth look at specific topics using interactive maps and timelines, slideshows, resource libraries, video presentations, and interviews with practitioners.

The course material is designed around group participation, and I'd like you to be a member of my learning group called Test Group. To join this group, go to http://members.rootsofhealthinequity.org/login/subscriber/10823.

Log in with your NACCHO email and password. If you do not have one, first register at the main NACCHO website.

I've looked at the units in this course and I think we will learn a lot and have some interesting discussions. Let's get started in about two weeks.

I look forward to working with you.

Learn more about this course at http://www.rootsofhealthinequity.org/

This is where your personal note appears.
Sample #8: Example of an Active Group Page (General Group)
Tips and Tools for Facilitating Dialogue about Social Justice

The goal of your work in this course is to co-create knowledge in a respectful and engaging community. To meet this goal, you are asked to initiate and participate in challenging — but ultimately rewarding — dialogue about power, privilege, and social injustice.

You and your group will benefit the most from this experience by establishing and maintaining a safe and constructive space for dialogue. NACCHO has compiled a few tips and tools about group facilitation that may help you establish an equitable, effective, and comfortable group.

Negotiate common safe space.

Create a nonjudgmental space for challenging discussions by establishing "ground rules." Review your group's ground rules often and remind group members who violate them. Discussion comments will be flagged and possibly deleted if your group members consider them offensive or disrespectful.

Acknowledge the challenges.

This course explores unjust systems and ways of thinking that have taken hundreds of years to construct. Because these systems are entrenched, commiseration about the painfulness and pervasiveness of oppression is a natural and important part of dialogue about power, privilege and social injustice. However, as part of this community, you are asked to directly confront the structural injustices influencing your life and work, and become personally responsible for problem-solving. Even as you recognize the importance of this work, you may find the process difficult. Consider that your participation in this course is one step in a long and intensive journey towards social justice.

Notice how power and privilege work in your group discussions.

Acknowledge and address how power and privilege are being exercised in your group, particularly as your group establishes and revisits group norms. For example, in a common experience during discussions about power, privilege, and social injustice, people belonging to historically marginalized communities are often asked by people belonging to privileged groups to share experiences and knowledge, without a mutual exchange. In this way, knowledge and painful experiences are "harvested" to educate the privileged, even as those who share them have little opportunity to influence group norms, values, processes, or outcomes. This dynamic can undermine trust and foster resentment. At an institutional level, this dynamic is one NACCHO hopes to address through your participation in this learning collaborative.

Review and reflect on a few background resources.

As you form a group and establish group norms, NACCHO strongly recommends reviewing and reflecting on the resources below. Each resource describes an approach to facilitating tough conversations and includes helpful examples of issues you may encounter during dialogue about power, privilege, and social injustice.

• Sheri Lyn Schmidt and Stephen J. Dunn. Talking About Race Facilitation Guide. College Station, TX: Texas A&M University, 1994.

Sign Up for the "Roots of Health Inequity" Online Course

Signing up for the "Roots of Health Inequity" online course is easy. There is no fee and you can get started at any time. Just go to http://members.rootsofhealthinequity.org and log in with your current NACCHO email and password.

If you are not registered at NACCHO, then go to http://www.naccho.org/ and sign up there. When your registration is complete, use the same email and password to log into the "Roots of Health Inequity" course.

Once you log in, you will see your "Dashboard" with personal information. From here you can join a group or create a group. You must be a member of at least one group to access the educational content in the course units.

For quick access to the course units, join the "General Group." On the group page you will see the titles of each unit under the heading "Units." Click on one of these to see that unit.